Injuries sustained in two car accident

by Janice Harrington
Review Editor

Two people were sent to hospital last week after a two vehicle accident near Olds.

Edith Wilson, age 76, and her passenger, Nels Peterson, both of Olds, were sent to hospital with neck injuries after the accident occurred 16 km west of Olds on Highway 27.

Olds RCMP said a car driven by 35-year-old Brenda Mesiatowsky of Innisfail was struck from behind while she waited to turn south at the intersection of Highway 27 and Secondary Highway 766 last Tuesday. RCMP said road and weather conditions and alcohol were not factors in the accident which happened shortly before noon.

Wilson suffered serious injuries and continues to be treated at the Olds hospital. Peterson was treated and released. Mesiatowsky suffered only slight injuries.

Olds RCMP said they are still investigating the accident and are contemplating charges against Wilson.

ENVIRONMENT TIPS

Have you got old clothes to throw away? Instead of heading for the garbage, consider taking clothes still in good shape to your local second hand store. You might make money on them or you can donate them for a worthy cause. If the clothes are too far gone, try using them for rags. It's more practical than using paper towels for polishing and cleaning.

Binge leads to arrest

An Olds man who lunged at a police officer and pulled a pocket knife after he had been handcuffed will be sentenced on the offence next month.

James Crossan, 35, was arrested on July 18 after a relative phoned the RCMP out of concern that Crossan, who had been drinking heavily, was about to drive to Calgary. When RCMP approached Crossan, they discovered a can of pepper spray, a prohibited weapon in Canada. While the RCMP tried to take the can away from Crossan, he became violent and lunged at an officer who then arrested him, handcuffed him and put him in the back of a police cruiser. Crossan then pulled a pocket knife which was attached to his belt but was quickly disarmed. He was charged with possession of a prohibited weapon, resisting arrest and possession of a dangerous weapon.

After pleading guilty to the charges, Crossan said the incident occurred after a drinking binge. He admitted he had a problem with alcohol but had been sober for seven years until this event occurred.

After listening to Crossan's testimony, Provincial Court Judge M.H. Porter order a pre-sentencing report. Crossan is expected to be sentenced on October 11, after the PSR is completed.

First time break

A Medicine Hat woman was given a conditional discharge after she pleaded guilty to possession of a narcotic.

Tania Harms was arrested outside an Olds motel on August 12 after an RCMP officer smelled marijuana. Approximately seven grams of the narcotic was found on Harms.

After hearing the details and learning Harms had no criminal record, Judge H.M. Porter told Harms he would allow her to keep her record clean.

"The first time around, I'll give you a break," he said. "The second time, you'll have a criminal record."

As part of the conditions of the discharge, Harms must perform 30 hours of community service within three months.

Crash leads to fine

An Olds woman who ran a stop sign and crashed into the side of a Greyhound bus was fined $500 and had her driver's licence suspended for one year after pleading guilty in provincial court.

Rhonda Sharpe was charged in June after RCMP watched her run a red light and hit the bus. No one was injured in the accident.

Sharpe admitted she had been drinking the night of the incident but said she had no intention of driving until a domestic incident led her to go searching for her sister.

The judge gave Sharpe until November 30 to pay the fine.

Thoughtless revenge

Extreme emotional distress was the defense for a Calgary woman charged for stealing $3000 from her estranged boyfriend.

Joy Travis, age 42, was charged in February after an Olds man ended the couple's two and a half year relationship. In sobbing testimony the judge strained to hear, Travis told the court she had accidentally taken the man's instant teller card in its envelope when she was packing up her things and when she discovered she had it plus his PIN, she took out 15 withdrawals of $200 each, totalling $3000.

After her first appearance in front of the judge, a visiting lawyer agreed to act on her behalf. After consulting with Travis, he told the court she had taken the money and put it into a manila envelope in exactly the denominations it had been withdrawn. The cash was never spent and when approached by the RCMP, she handed over the envelope immediately and admitted her act.

Judge H.M. Porter agreed Travis, who has no criminal record, seemed sincere in her regret over the incident and handed her a conditional discharge.

"This was not a crime of dishonesty, not an attempt to profit," he said. "It is not against the public interest and definitely in your interest that you not have a criminal record."

The discharge was made on the condition that Travis undertake some sort of counselling to help her deal with the distress she faced over the breakup.

Social Services fraud

An Olds woman who continued to collect benefits from Social Services for taking care of four grandchildren has been given a chance to pay back the money she owes before being sentenced.

Patricia Proulx, age 52, was charged in July after Social Services discovered she had continued to collect benefits for four children after one of the children was returned to his mother. The overpayment totalled more than $6000.

Proulx's defence lawyer told the court she had always intended to return the money by selling her home but after the sale was completed she discovered she only raised $4000. A cheque in that amount was handed over to the court.

The judge agreed to allow Proulx another month to raise the remaining amount before sentencing her on the fraud charge, to which she had pleaded guilty. She will return to court on October 18.

OPINIONS / EDITORIAL

Greetings from Ontario

Janice Harrington

One of the benefits of travel is the opportunity to see how life is lived in other parts of the world and since this is still Canada, it is very interesting to compare the new with what is known.

An interesting feature which seems to have leapt out and grabbed my attention here is the esthetic value inherent in the small towns. In Didsbury we are working to enhance our downtown core with plans laid out by the BRZ. Greenery, sidewalk improvements, benches, historic store fronts are all part of the plan. In Ontario, small towns seem to have made these kind of enhancements a way of life.

Brick and old fashioned street lamps are the norm. The streets are clean and the store fronts visually stimulating. And regardless of why the tourists come, they are flocking to these streets in droves and, from the looks of things, spending lots of their hard earned cash.

The idea can work much the same at home. Regardless of what there is to do otherwise in Didsbury, a beautiful presence makes a considerable difference. Look at Bragg Creek. What is there to do and see in that community? Granted, there is a thriving cottage community in Ontario but it cannot be the only reason why these small towns are busy. Heading out to the cottage is an escape from the "urban". Instead they come for the ambience, the sight-seeing and to appreciate the beauty of a small, safe community, all the same benefits we have in spades in Didsbury if we were wrapped in a spruced-up package.

With the enhancements, Didsbury can offer the same ambience, the same attraction as many of the small towns in Alberta and in Ontario who seem to thrive on the attention of day and weekend trip tourists. Put out historical street lights and wrought-iron benches. Make the stores attractive from the outside and give people a visually pleasing area to walk and they will do so just for the pleasure of it. Wandering into stores and unplanned purchases are a natural extension. People will come from all over just because it is a destination.

Another natural extension is the number of offers to purchase home owners will face. When you find a small community just outside a major centre which attracts the tourists, the people who want to make the pleasure a full time feeling will not be far behind. And that's good news for the tax rates.

It certainly works out here.

One of the defining characteristics of Canada is our universal, accessible and comprehensive health care system. It doesn't matter where you live in this country, how rich or poor you are, we all are entitled to receive the same level of health care.

I believe, in the 30 years since medicare was introduced in Saskatchewan, Canadians have come to see our national health care system as a Canadian birthright. It is one of the key characteristics that separates us from the Americans and is something we are known for around the world.

But health care in Alberta has come under serious attack. Ralph Klein and his government are pushing us towards a two-tier system where the rich have complete and faster access to necessary services, but the middle class and poor have second class care or no care at all.

Alberta is allowing private, for-profit health clinics like the Gimbel Eye Centres to charge individuals a facility fee for services and to bill the taxpayer for the rest. On October 15, a new national private clinics policy will come into effect. This federal government policy is meant to crack down on facility charges at private clinics which are against the Canada Health Act. Each province will have to either eliminate facility fees or fully fund the medical services provided.

If Alberta fails to comply, it will face stiff financial penalties. The federal government will deduct the facility charges from the province's annual health transfer payment. The cost to Alberta will be $7 million.

I strongly support Prime Minister Jean Chretien and Federal Health Minister Diane Marleau's actions on facility fees. Ralph Klein and his government must be sent a strong message that there must be things money cannot buy. And in this country, health care has to be one of them.

I urge you to let Chretien, Marleau and your Member of Parliament know of your strong support for the Federal Government's actions. You can write them at House of Commons, Ottawa, K1A 0A6.

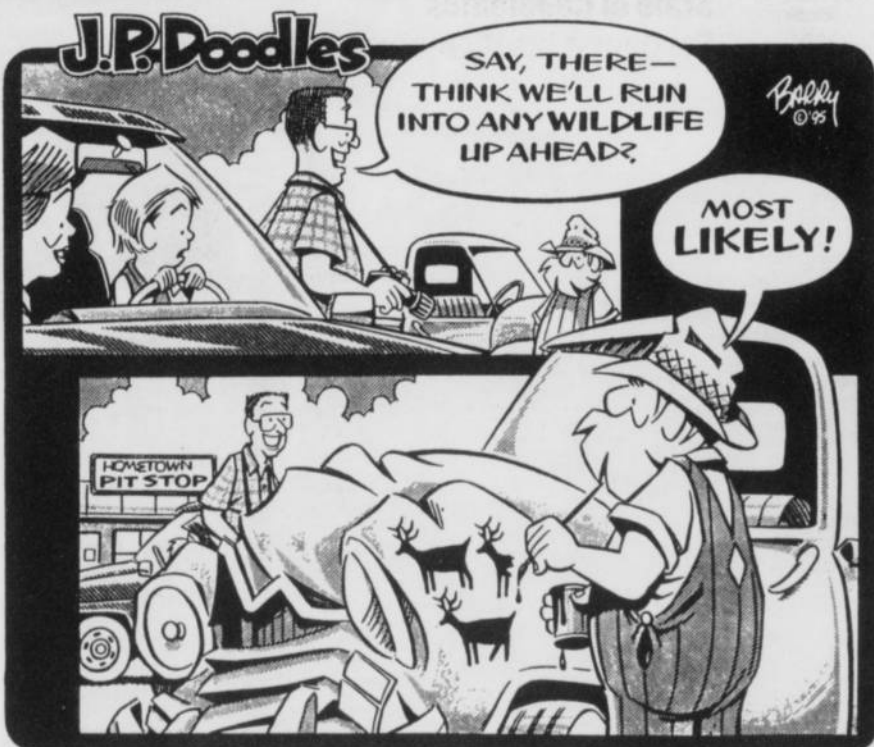

You can also send a strong message to Ralph Klein by getting a copy of and helping get signatures for Friends of Medicare's petition To Save Universal Medicare And Enhance Quality Health Care. We hope to present this petition to the Alberta Legislature during National Medicare Week, which is October 30-November 3.

If you would like a copy of the petition or more information about Friends of Medicare, please call 423-4581.

Costs of hospital cutting

At the Legislature

by Bill MacLaughlin
CKUA Correspondent

The next few weeks could make or break the Alberta government's great health care budget experiment and the battle may have been lost last Wednesday night in an Edmonton boardroom.

The experiment was simple: can you slash the health care budget by 18 percent and avoid responsibility by spinning off a new level of government to take the heat?

It's not original, but it's simple, and brilliant. Hand-pick people to sit on something called a Regional Health Authority. Give them less money to run health care and tell them to make it work, somehow. When the trouble starts, when people complain because hospitals close and nurses are stretched too thin, tell the complainants to take it up with the Regional Health Authority.

And it's been working, so far. But it's only been two months since the RHAs officially took over, and the cuts are starting to show up. Despite all the ledger juggling and euphemism creation, those hand-picked appointees can see perfectly clearly that, in many cases, the cuts have hit bone. Trouble is, the prescription from the government is, keep cutting.

Last month, pressured by angry taxpayers, the Westview Regional Health Authority said no. It cancelled a planned hospital closure in Stony Plain. A deficit budget was inevitable...at least until the new sheriff showed up. The new Deputy Health Minister, Jane Fulton, came to the next meeting, smiled sweetly, and reminded Westview's board members that if there wasn't a balanced budget by the end of the month, they could be fired...and replaced with more compliant appointees. It worked. The board produced a balanced budget.

It was a tough message, but critical. If RHAs are allowed to start drifting into the red, the government's plans for the biggest single chunk of their budget are doomed.

Last week, though, Jane Fulton's predecessor got up in a public meeting and issued a dire warning of what would befall Edmonton if that city's Capital Health Authority was to toe the government line by voting to cut another $15 million. Don Phillipon, the man who oversaw the entire health restructuring program, is now a senior administrator for the CHA, and he knew exactly what to say to explain why Edmonton must ignore the government's orders.

"We don't think it's feasible. We think there would be very significant problems for emergency and ICU (intensive care units), there would be major increases in waiting lists...The cost in human terms would be very major. We must slow the pace of change."

Five days earlier, CHA board members and administrators were still planning to slash $13 million and institute those changes, to toe the government line. But after a heated meeting that raged for five hours behind closed doors, the plan changed. The board chose to cut $4 million.

Hours before the meeting, the health minister spoke plainly, warning that she expects RHAs to stick to their business plans. After the meeting, though, after her former deputy had leaned into the microphone and detailed the consequences of toeing the government line, she was unavailable and the message from Alberta Health spokesman Clay Adams had nothing to do with firing anyone. In fact, it's clear that McClellan won't do anything this year.

"We would not welcome them to come back to us next year with a deficit budget," Adams observed, explaining that the Department is taking the position that the Capital Health Authority has a one time problem. Alberta Health says the Westview board, by contrast, "was simply saying 'give us more dollars' ". Nice try.

A senior official with the Capital Health Authority calls it "the biggest blink of all" and that may be accurate. More RHAs have important votes coming up. They're all short on cash and facing serious problems and for board members all across the province making health care decisions that will affect their families and their neighbors. McClellan's response to Edmonton can only be seen as a precedent and an opportunity.

JAIL-N-BAIL TOP SECRETS

Jail-N-Bail is a fun and unique way to raise money for the Canadian Cancer Society.

Participants are "arrested" by a member of the Jail-N-Bail squad and taken down to the jail, where they appear before a mock judge and jury (and boy, can they mock!). Each jailbird is brought up on dubious charges, definitely found guilty, and then bail is set. Jailbirds attempt to raise their bail by convincing friends and co-workers to donate money - even if it means they will eventually be set free! (All donations are tax deductible and receipts are issued.) Telephones and fax machines are provided and it is suggested that jailbirds bring personal phone and fax directories. The usual sentence is one hour, although this can be considerably reduced for "good behaviour" by having pledge sheets partially completed beforehand. (Pledge sheets are mailed out to jailbirds along with a confirmation of their arrest time as soon as they are scheduled.)

As a memento of the jailbird's time in the slammer, a mugshot is taken and later mailed, along with a great big thank you for helping in the fight against cancer.

Helping the helpers

by Elaine Wilson
Review writer

While they're professionally stoic and routinely heroic, emergency response workers too often literally look death in the face and it inevitably takes its toll.

"Shows like '911' raise this image of these guys as somehow superhuman," said Steve Osborne, a psychologist and the designated regional Critical Incident Stress Debriefing (CISD) responder. "The TV image of these guys is not one hundred percent accurate. They're just people, they're no different than us. When we see something that makes us queasy, don't think it doesn't make them queasy too. They may use their black humor to cover it but they deal with it so regularly, they need help to deal with that stress."

Facing life and death circumstances is a regular occurrence for local rescue workers but a program is in place to help them overcome the trauma.

In an emergency situation emergency workers obviously depend heavily on each other. Osborne noted stress-related symptoms such as feeling overwhelmed and panicky, or unable to mesh smoothly with co-workers can seriously impair decision making skills and concentration when they're most needed.

The need for intervention can be triggered by long term exposure to stress, or by a single particularly harrowing episode.

"There are a few things that take it out of the realm of 'the ordinary'," Osborne said. "One is when a child is involved, people tend to project a lot, they personalize a lot more. Another one is when they know the victim, or when they arrive and realize there is nothing they can do."

The CISD program is relatively new in Alberta. Since 1985 the Disaster Social Services Branch and Alberta Public Safety Services, in conjunction with the Mental Health Services Division of Alberta Health, have worked to establish a province-wide support network. Alberta's original director, Robert van Goethem, was initially obliged to provide 'hard data' to the government to 'prove' the program's merit.

The Hinton railway train disaster on February 8, 1986, lamentably provided all the 'hard data' required.

Early on a Saturday morning an east bound VIA Rail passenger train was struck head on by a west bound Canadian National freight train. An excerpt from van Goethem's own report read: "Rescue personnel arrived at the disaster site to be confronted by about 100 injured survivors...milling about in a confused and chaotic state. Some had been heroically trying to rescue others; many had seen fellow passengers literally vaporized before their eyes."

A follow-up survey of responders who agreed to participate in a study revealed that over 75 percent of the participants deemed post-disaster counselling provided within two days of such an event "very important".

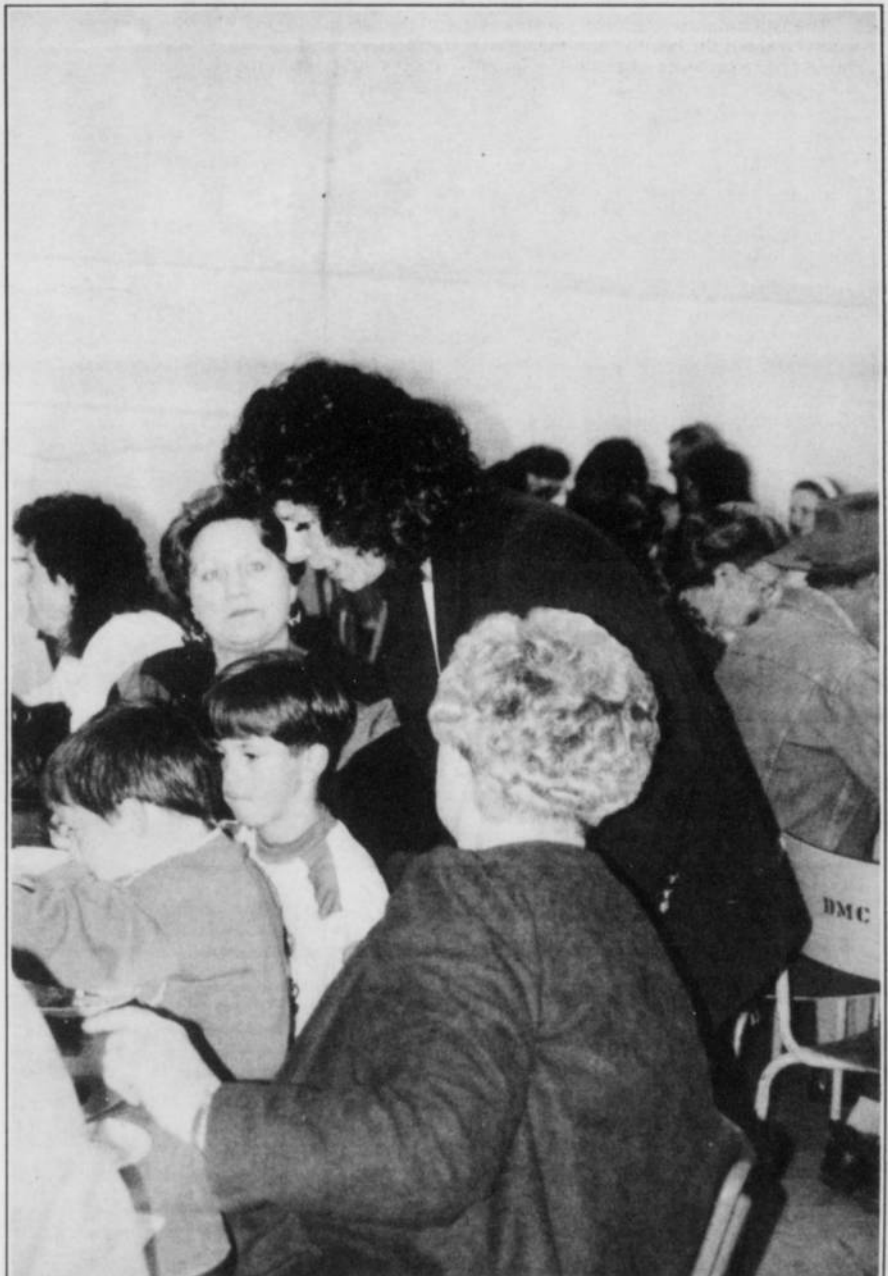

The departure of Robert van Goethem and restructuring of government agendas has, of late, placed the program in flux. However, Alberta Health staff recognize the necessity of the don't know how to handle all that emotional material. Just ventilating it isn't enough. A large part of what the debriefings do is help these people understand why they're feeling what they're feeling; how long they're going to feel that way and that others feel that way too, that they're not alone in what they're going through."

Locally, during regular office hours (8:15 a.m. - 4:30 p.m.), CISD personnel can be reached by calling Alberta Health Central Region contact person Carmen Authenac directly at (403) 340-5466. On a seven-day-a-week, 24-hour basis, the CISD connection may be made by calling 1-800-272-9600.

Saying goodbye. Former realtor Dorothy Moore held a farewell breakfast for clients and friends on Saturday morning and used the chance to chat and let people know her future plans. Moore is leaving her real estate business to pursue a Masters of Business Administration and is running for municipal council in the October election. The breakfast of pancakes, bacon, sausage and eggs, was cooked up by the Lions Club.

As we gear up for the cooler weather it is not too early to think of protecting ourselves against the pending "flu" season. Despite its reputation as a nuisance, influenza is also a potential killer. Each year in Canada, influenza related illness is responsible for thousands of hospital admissions, job absenteeism and comes with an enormous price tag.

Influenza or "flu" is a very contagious disease caused by a virus and spread by coughing, sneezing and even talking. The illness consists of fever, chills, sore throat, weakness, loss of appetite and muscle aches and is more severe than the common cold. The real dangers are the complications. Influenza leaves the body's defenses weak and open to other infection, particularly in those people with underlying chronic illness.

Pneumonia, a very serious lung infection is the most common complication and can be fatal. Natural immunity against the influenza virus does not exist because the structure of the virus varies from year to year. That is why we need to have a new shot each flu season. Antibiotics are also not effective against the flu.

Yearly vaccination is the most effective way of preventing influenza or reducing the severity of illness and saving lives. It will not protect you from the common cold however.

The influenza vaccine for the 1995-96 season contain these strains:

- a) Johannesburg/33/94 - like strain
- b) Texas/36/91 - like strain
- c) Beijing/194/93 - like strain

Vaccine is provided free of charge to people over the age of 65 and anyone with chronic medical conditions such as heart, lung, or kidney disease or diabetes. Residents of nursing homes or chronic care facilities are also at risk.

Today's vaccines are extremely safe and most people have little or no reaction. Some may experience a slight soreness at the needle site. Also, you cannot get influenza from the vaccine.

Anyone allergic to eggs or egg products should not get the shot because tiny traces of egg protein may be present in the vaccine. Any person under 65 or who does not fit under the "At Risk" category can receive the flu shot at a cost of $5.

Watch for dates of flu clinics at your local district health unit office.

Special to the Review

DHS Student Council members are busy planning activities for all DHS students to participate in. The elected members this year are:

President: Trisha Hogg
Vice President: Bobbi Jackson
Secretary: Kari Aussenhus
Treasurer: Ben Fulkerth
Social Convenors: Neil Mason, Andrea McCulloch, Reta Blakely, Kory Simon
Sports Convenors: Dave Hunt, Sheldon McKee, Kristi Jacobson, Mandy Pederman, Andrea Rosadiuk
Grade Reps: Jeff Lentz, Vikki Whittaker, Jessica McNeil, Michelle Devaux, Jody Hinds, Megan Carpenter, Gerry Samiosette

The first event is "Battle of the Grades" taking place on September 29th. It kicks off with the teachers cooking burgers for lunch. This year each grade is required to dress up; the grade 12s as farmers, 11s as sheep, 10s as cows and the 9s as pigs. The grade 9s offer a pledge as a token of their esteem to the grade 12s. A dance with music from Underground DJ Service wraps up the day at 8:30 p.m. (chaperones are needed!) The winning grade gets into the dance free of charge. This is only the first of many activities that Student Council has planned for the students of DHS this year.

Baseball his profession, Cal Ripken his name,

 His story, his glory, less take and more give,
 Cal Ripken has shown the world how winners live.
 One thousand, two hundred and thirty one days,
 Year in and year out on the job baseball plays.

4-5-6 Basketball sessions

Youngsters looking for a fun activity Thursday evenings now have a new option. Boys and girls at the grade 4, 5 or 6 level can sign up for a 10 week session to hone basketball skills and dexterity for a $25 registration fee. Coach Mary Trenholm would very much appreciate interested applicants register as soon as possible to allow organizers time to finalize details. No special gear is needed; if you have a basketball, bring it along, but a T-shirt, shorts and gym shoes are sufficient. In addition to having fun, Trenholm said the youngsters would "learn teamwork, discipline, gain stamina and get a good work out." Trenholm may be contacted at 335-3325.

Christmas Cantata preparations

The Christmas Cantata is a long-time Didsbury tradition which coordinator Shirley Portingale and Chorale Society President Jo James intend to ensure continues with melodic vigour. "If you can carry a tune you'll enjoy it; you don't need to read music," coordinator Shirley Portingale said. Anyone and everyone interested in adding a voice to the Christmas Cantata group is welcome to attend practices to be held starting Sunday, Sept. 24 at the Zion Evangelical Church west of the post office. Practice sessions will run from 3 p.m. to 4:30 p.m. "We need people from the community," Portingale said. The concert, with the actual date yet to be confirmed, is slated for late November or early December. Those interested in learning more can contact Portingale at 335-4692.

New home for the Mountain View Credit Union

Since signs at the corner of the downtown 20th Street intersection appeared last week announcing the site as the future home of Mountain View Credit Union, Didsbury Branch Manager said the most often asked question addressed to him lately has been: "When?" General Manager Norris Thompson said the actual construction date is not known at this point. "That depends on several factors," Thompson said. First up is formal board approval, followed by analysis of cost factors. "We are planning to build in Didsbury," Thompson confirmed. "I can't give you a time when construction will start, however, we will probably start working on a building plan sometime early next year." Thompson said precise details were not available, but that the plan would likely call for a building in the 3,000 square foot range.

Retirement no option for new Pengary owners

by Janice Harrington
Review Editor

Early retirement turned out to have a bit different meaning for a former Edson couple who recently took over the Pengary House.

Myrna and John Grimmond decided last year for John to take early retirement from his work.

But a decision to move to be closer to their family prompted the couple to come out of retirement and take over the bed and breakfast operation.

"Being retired, we thought we could move closer to Calgary and spend more time with the grandchildren," John said. "We looked at a lot of little towns around Calgary but we liked it here."

John said the couple weren't planning to purchase the B and B but when the realtor showing them available houses in town passed it by, they decided to take a look.

"We took a look and thought we were too young to put up our feet and watch soaps all day," he said.

The bed and breakfast operation is not new to the couple. Their youngest daughter owns one in Cochrane and they were delighted with the idea of opening their own.

Much of the operation, formerly owned by Penny and Gary Dolha, will stay the same but the Grimmonds do have some changes in mind. Myrna, a former antique store owner, plans to fill the decor with warm and inviting antique to reflect the history of the heritage home.

"We really like the idea of having the history of the area reflected in the home," John said. "We want to give it the feeling you are really in the country."

While the name still remains the same for now, the Grimmonds are planning to change it at a later date. They are also considering reopening the tea-room.

"We have had a lot of people call us about that," John said. One of the biggest changes they are instituting currently will be the addition of a honeymoon service. Already the Grimmonds are planning to Saying hello. The new owners of the Pengary House held an open house last Friday to introduce themselves to the community and let area residents take a look at the changes they have made to the bed and breakfast. John and Myrna Grimmond, formerly of Edson, moved to Didsbury planning simply to be closer to their grandchildren and ended up owning the historic house. The two are considering re-opening the tea room next year.

Main Street Beat

I want to take this week to discuss a subject that is of importance to everyone but, unfortunately is not thought about as often as it should. The subject is communication. The importance of communications is obvious, yet so much poor communication occurs.

To businesses communication is perhaps the most important facet. Businesses survive and prosper on the strength of their communication skills. Well done signs, good advertising, hours of opening, sales and promotions, customer relations and even the transmittal of reputations are all part of a successful business communication strategy.

Signs are often the most obvious communication tool used by a business. Business signs can be wonderful additions to a business but a poorly thought-out or executed sign will confuse your customer, detract from the shopping and physical environment, as well as detract from your business trade. One of Main Street's aspects is its Signage Program which offers matching funds (up to a maximum of $500) to businesses that develop high quality signage meeting with the approval of the Main Street Advisory Board's Design sub-committee. Main Street can also help with the design of high quality signs.

Customer relations are also an important part of a communication strategy, perhaps the most important aspect. Another word for this is service. Service can make or break a small town business and high quality service is one of the most important selling points of our businesses. Service comprises an entire spectrum of items including how you and your employees communicate with your customers, the attitude of your employees to your customers, how disputes are handled and how you market your goods and services. The old adage to remember is that a happy customer will tell a friend, but an unhappy customer will tell all of their friends.

Another aspect of communication is the telephone. I have noticed that many of our businesses have Calgary-direct telephone lines to access the huge Calgary-area market. This is good for the health of our businesses and, of course, for the town as well. Unfortunately these lines are quite expensive and the money spent on these costly items is money that leaves the town and goes to AGT.

Telephone lines are particularly important in light of the way that the world economy is shifting from a capital-intensive, industrial based economy to an economy based on knowledge and its transmittal. This new economy is exciting as the product-knowledge is so easily transmittal by fiber optic telephone lines. This economy and its products rely on cheap, fast and reliable communication. Every telephone, fax, or long distance charge is added to the cost of doing business and to the product so value must be added to ensure that profitability continues.

Interestingly North America was running out of telephone numbers. The increasing number of fax, cellular and second lines to both homes and businesses was quickly eating up the available phone numbers. The response was the requirement that all long distance calls, even within an area code, must include the area code in order to be connected. Now area codes can be created that have numbers other than a 1 or 0 in the second position (i.e. 403 or 216 can now be 433 or 286) so that the total number of phone numbers available increases dramatically.

The point of this column is that in today's economy communication is more important than ever before. Communication is not simply the act of speaking to each other but comprises an entire spectrum of actions, reactions and events. Main Street is particularly interested in signage for our downtown business community.

Anyone interested in any aspect of Main Street is invited to call or visit the Main Street Office located next to the Post Office. Advice and resource material on the preservation and rehabilitation of old build-host two weddings this fall and they are hoping for more.

"We would also like to do some catering," John said.

In the meantime, the Grimmonds are making themselves at home in their new community and took the extra step to introduce themselves to the residents by holding an open house last week in celebration of their grand opening.

Long distance savings for Didsbury

TRANS CANADA AUDIT

Specializing in:
Utility and Telecommunications

The glut of new long distance companies on the market has created a lot of confusion these days, but a new local service is offering a simple way to save.

Lo-Link, a service of Trans-Canada Audit of Didsbury, is a select route calling service which allows Didsbury callers to make unlimited long distance calls to Calgary, Crossfield and Priddis for one low monthly price. And Didsbury customers are beginning to line up to sign on.

Available to both residential and commercial customers, the Lo-Link service is provided through savings discovered in AGT tariffs (price schedules).

Corinne Gough, owner of Trans-Canada Audit, said she searched for a year and a half to find enough information along with specialized equipment to offer competitive long distance rates for Didsbury calls to Calgary.

With the help of a technical firm and in-house staff, "We finally achieved it," Corinne said.

Trans-Canada Audit, started in April 1994, audits utilities for companies to find savings through refunds and tariff regulations which may be missed by the utility company.

The result of their effort was the chance to offer Didsbury callers a program through which residential customers pay $24.95 and commercial customers pay $39.95 for unlimited calling to Calgary. Besides personal and business calls, the service is also great for Internet users.

"The beauty of it is you can use Lo-Link and still keep your other long distance savings plans," Corinne said.

As for the savings, Corinne said they meet all Canadian Radio and Telecommunications Commission standards and are governed by the AGT tariffs. Calls are still placed on AGT lines but, because of the recent CRTC decision to allow resale of long distance by smaller businesses, Trans-Canada can use their discovered savings and pass them on to the consumer.

The Goughs, who are relatively new to the area, met in the Banff area in 1979. They moved to Didsbury along with their three children in 1993. Corinne said they are pleased to be able to operate a business out of their home in Didsbury and give other Didsbury residents a chance to save on their long distance bills.

"I grew up on a farm in Saskatchewan," she said. "This really feels like home to me."

The Goughs are currently renovating their home to add more office space for their business.

To sign up for Lo-Link or to find out more about the service, call 337-3047. Callers who sign up for October and November will receive the rest of September's calling for free. Internet users can also take advantage of TCA's expertise in setting up Internet connections and home page construction.

THE DIDSBURY REVIEW

Cremona minor hockey and ringette

by Ryan Robertson
Special to the Review

In many ways it is hard to believe, but soon we will be playing hockey and ringette once again.

After a summer that wasn't, it perhaps could be true that our only reflection will be to the future and the entertainment our team's will provide over the next six months of activity.

1995-96 offers Cremona seven hockey teams and hopefully one ringette team. Registration nights were September 13 and 14 and a figure of 115 registrants were realized, which is comparable to last years campaign. Again a hockey specialty clinic was offered as a supplement to help get the ball rolling in the right direction early in the season. The clinic is very capably handled by Todd Hass, who has been here several times previously and has done an excellent job. The dates chosen are October 21 and 22. Please plan to attend.

This year also provides our association with the return of a strong executive, unchanged from last year and all are set to meet the challenges forthcoming in this season.

It was good to see so many familiar faces through the course of the registration nights. We also welcome newcomers to the system and our hope is your experiences here will be good ones. Through the two nights I know I got the bug for hockey once again. It happens in the fall with warm days and cool nights and the call back to the arena. Hang on everyone - we're set to go again. Good luck to all concerned and have fun.

On Monday, October 2nd at 7:30 p.m., upstairs in the arena a general meeting of Cremona Minor Hockey and Ringette will be held. All are welcome to attend.

Ross Parsons recently attended the Montreal Canadiens Rookie Camp. His conditioning was excellent and he scored a goal as well. His experiences increased when he played in an exhibition game for Montreal against the New York Rangers on September 15. He will continue to play for the Regina Pats this season and his presence is certainly being felt. Congratulations Rosco, keep your dreams!

WHO'S WENDY???

This seems to be the most recent question buzzing around Didsbury this past month. Well - if you have a few minutes I'd like to tell you who WENDY is!

In October of 94 I was invited by Dorothy, Dan and Re/Max Mountainview to join them in the Didsbury office and begin a new phase of my career in your friendly and bustling little town. At that time I had had my real estate license for one year and was very honored to think they wanted me to join their highly successful and very ambitious office.

As I live on an acreage east of Didsbury and halfway between Olds and Didsbury, I work both areas very actively and full time and am able to provide my clients with a variety of properties and options. With my background being very farm orientated I am hoping to expand my "field" more into acreages and farms as well as the residential aspect.

Since coming into this office, I have successfully completed several transactions - however, as we all know - Dorothy and Dan's names are on most of the real estate signs here in town so no one knows that WENDY is at work. I think I shall bring this fact up at our next office meeting and see if they will let me make up a sign that says "WENDY SOLD THIS PROPERTY." All joking aside, I have very much enjoyed the Re/Max office here in town and like many of you out there I too am going to miss Dorothy very much. I would like to say - I wish you all the best Dorothy, and don't think for one minute that we will let you leave the real estate scene for any length of time.

I am the mother of 4 children and I feel this helps me in many ways to relate to families and their needs and wants whether buying or selling.

Now just between you and I - I'm going to give you information on properties here in town that were either my listings and were sold or were other realtor's listings that I sold. But let's not tell Dorothy or Dan - I'd hate to spoil their fun.

I currently have 11 listings in Didsbury alone and am always looking for more. This list does not include any of the work I have been doing in the surrounding area. I would like all of you to know that I take my work very seriously and plan to be very successful with my Real Estate career. I look forward to meeting all of you and I'd be more than happy to help you with your Real Estate needs.

Daines suffers severe spinal injury

Special to the Review

Lowell Johnston bailed himself out of jail in the bull riding; Greg Cassidy got right back into the scrap in the steer wrestling and Joan Unger locked up her first Canadian Finals berth in the barrel racing.

But none of that really seemed to matter as the curtain came down on the annual Interior Provincial Stampede at Armstrong, BC last weekend.

The professional rodeo community was hurting - hurting badly. One of their most respected cowboys, three-time Canadian champion Duane Daines, was in hospital with severe back injuries.

The 36-year-old Innisfail, AB cowboy was crushed against an iron chute by a horse called Blue Boy in the saddle bronc riding. The mishap occurred as the horse reared at the moment the chute gate cracked. Daines immediately flopped to the ground, his back broken, his body paralyzed from the waist down. He was taken to hospital at nearby Vernon in the north Okanagan and was later transported by plane to Vancouver General hospital.

Doctors described the injury as "very serious." Some 36 hours after the accident, doctors were doing exploratory tests, examining x-rays and considering surgery or placing their patient in a body brace.

Blue Boy, a powerful, 1,300 lb. blue roan gelding, is known for bad habits during the saddling process and was cross-tied upon entering the chute. "Just as the gate opened, the horse started to turn out and then threw himself back, crushing Duane into the back end of the chute," said Keith Hyland, rodeo administrator for the Canadian Professional Rodeo Association. Hyland was assisting Daines get out on the outlaw.

"Within moments, he was coherent and aware his injuries were serious," said Hyland. "He told a paramedic applying a neck brace that his neck was fine but, 'I think I broke my back again.' He knew he had no feeling in his legs."

Daines fractured his back in a similar accident in 1986 at the Williams Lake, BC Stampede, though he suffered no paralysis on that occasion.

It's expected the 17-year pro will remain in Vancouver General for at least two weeks before moving him to Calgary. Doctors can't say if Daines will regain feeling in his lower body. They are waiting for the swelling to subside; but it is known his 11th vertebrae was shattered and his spinal cord is pinched. It was also confirmed he suffered a broken rib.

The two-time Canadian all-around champion and 1991 Canadian saddle bronc champion was planning to retire at the end of the season. He only had nine broncs left on his calendar, one this week at Pendleton, OR, one at each of Lacombe and Hanna, AB the weekend after next and six at the Canadian Finals in Edmonton in November.

Daines was also the choice of many of his fellow cowboys to succeed Jim Dunn as president of the Canadian Professional Rodeo Association at the end of the year.

And his wife Cheryl, a pro barrel racer and school teacher, is expecting a baby in mid-December.

Meanwhile, Skeeter Thurston of Nanton, AB won his third straight Canadian rodeo, scoring 85 points on Bruce Flewelling's Silver Wings to top the bronc riding at Armstrong for $2,104. That carried him into fifth in the Canadian standings with just two rodeos, at Hanna and

Pool splashings

Special to the Review

Some of you may have read that one of our councillors is heading to Kananaskis Country on Saturday, September 23 to accept an award from the Royal Life Saving Society of Canada recently won by the Didsbury Aquatic Centre. Well, be assured that some of our lifeguards are tagging along to celebrate this achievement! We really wouldn't miss it. We are certainly proud of this accomplishment which was won over all other pools in Alberta situated in a town with a population of less than 7,500. The award we are receiving is called the Class 9 Affiliate Award. The points earned toward this award are based on the number of Royal Life Saving courses run in 1994. These courses included Jr. Resuscitation, Lifesaving I, II and III, Bronze Medallion, Sr. Resuscitation, Bronze Cross, National Lifeguard Service award and Aquatic Emergency Care. There are many young swimmers in our area trained in water rescue through participation in these courses and we thank them for this participation. To say the least, they helped win us an award - to say the most, these youth are developing or have developed into very capable lifesavers and future lifeguards; some are now lifeguards at our pool. I think we should be extremely proud of this accomplishment, as should the participants!

Speaking of RLSSC, we have even more of their courses scheduled to run in October and November. Bronze Medallion/Sr. Resuscitation will run in October. If you are 13-years-old or older and have a grey or white swimming ability or Lifesaving I, II or III, this course might be of interest to you. BM/SR is a pre-requisite course for any further RLSSC training, such as Bronze Cross and NLS. A National Lifeguard course is also set to begin in October and will run October 21 and 22 and November 4, 5 and 10. To take this course, you must be 16 or older, have a current Bronze Cross and Standard First Aid or AEC. Enquire about these courses by calling us at the DAC.

Grizzlys ready to roll

Special to the Review

Things are somewhat quiet in Olds as the Grizzly's exhibition schedule ended last Tuesday. The Black and Gold finished their pre-season with a modest 3-1 record, ready to begin the regular season on Saturday, 23rd when they travel to Lloydminster for a 7:30 p.m. start. The Grizzlys will also play Lloydminster the following day, and then travel back home for one more game against the Blazers on the 29th.

No one is really sure how the two teams will match up. "I haven't heard much on Lloydminster this year", said General Manager Dave Becker, "but they will probably be fairly strong."

One thing Becker is quite sure of, is this year's team. "We have a real good team. I think we're just as good or better than last year's team."

The Grizzlys will start the 1995-96 season with 15 return players from last year, plus two new players from the Czech Republic.

It should be an exciting and hopefully good start for the Grizzlys and their fans, as they try to establish themselves as the number one team.
